

American Education (Joel H. Spring)

Part 1 (Chapters 1-4)

Chapter 1

Thinking Critically About History

Joel Spring wrote this book with the intention of combining a particular approach with a more comprehensive perspective of the whole idea of history education. We the readers will be given a variety of historical interpretations and issues and we must decide which interpretation is the right one. Why must we interpret history? Many historians agree on dates and personalities involved in many historical events, however they have a hard time agreeing on the motives behind everything. Numerous questions embody the issues debated in the writing of history. Some of the questions debated throughout the course of history are: Were public schools established so that all people would be able to protect their political and economic right? Were they established to protect the power of the upper echelon of society who control the economic and political ideas taught to students in schools? Were they established to assure the dominance of the Protestant Anglo-American culture over other considered "inferior" cultures such as Native American, Irish American and African American cultures? Finally, were public schools necessary to guarantee the education of all people?

Many of the answers to these questions have important implications for a person's future in choices that one makes and the actions of how they handle him/herself. The answers help form impressions and feelings about the past for each individual person. Many people do not remember details of history, however they do develop feelings about past events. Thinking about history involves both intelligent contemplation of contradictory translations, issues surrounding schools, and reflections of how one feels about past events. A person's knowledge, impressions, and emotions regarding the past have forced future actions. Individuals often make decisions based on what they feel were the historical purposes and goals of an institution. Many interpretations will be presented throughout the book enabling the reader to form an opinion about past events and think about future responses.
