Exploring Character

Oliver is a fascinating and endearing character in that he has so many deep, vulnerable, and tender thoughts and finds it difficult to communicate with those around him. In these exercises, students are asked to analyze the difference between what a character thinks, says, and does, and explore the relationships among characters within the novel.

Character Relationship Map

This exercise asks students to analyze character relationships in graphic form. Use of google drawings is helpful but students can easily learn on their feet with this.

Character Thought Maps

The difference between what Oliver thinks, says, and does is heartbreaking at times, though it can be easy to miss. In this exercise, students slow-down a bit, and select a situation in which Oliver thinks one thing, says another, and does something different. Students can follow the instructions below:

1. Make a copy of this google drawing for yourself and add it to your drive.
2. Identify a situation in your novel in which your character seems to be thinking one thing, saying another thing, and doing something else. Summarize the situation and provide a page number in the red box in the upper right-hand side of the drawing.
3. In the green speech bubble, quote your character. Type directly from your novel and say what your character said in this situation.
4. In the blue thought bubble, describe what your character was thinking at this time. If your story is told from your character's perspective, you may quote the text. You may, however, have to infer what the character was thinking, and that's okay.
5. In the yellow action burst, describe what the character did. Again, you may quote the text directly or summarize it.
6. Finally in the purple box, explore the difference between what the character says, thinks, and does. What does this say about the character's values, attitudes, or beliefs? Do these beliefs change or stay the same throughout the novel? Explain. Create the text of the question itself, and replace it with your paragraph response (4-5 sentences).
