

PROTEIN SYNTHESIS

TRANSLATION

1. Translation is the process of synthesizing a protein from an mRNA template. The mRNA template is read in groups of three bases called codons. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid.

2. During translation, the ribosome moves along the mRNA template, reading the codons and adding the corresponding amino acids to the growing polypeptide chain.

3. The process of translation continues until the ribosome reaches a stop codon, which signals the end of the protein.

THE GENETIC CODE

"One codon at a time"

1. Biological systems use sequences of three nucleotides to specify the amino acids that are used to build proteins. These sequences are called codons.

2. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid. The genetic code is a "dictionary" of all the combinations of three nucleotides that specify the 20 amino acids.

3. The genetic code is universal, meaning that all living organisms use the same code to specify amino acids.

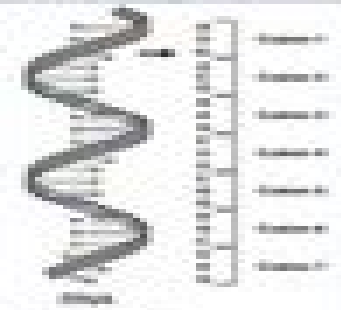

4. The genetic code is a "triplet" code, meaning that three nucleotides specify one amino acid.

"One gene - one protein"

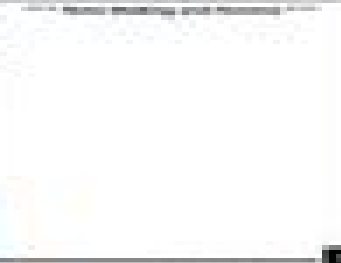

1. Each gene contains a specific sequence of three nucleotides that specify a particular amino acid. The sequence of amino acids in a protein is determined by the sequence of three nucleotides in the gene.

2. The sequence of amino acids in a protein is determined by the sequence of three nucleotides in the gene.

3. The sequence of amino acids in a protein is determined by the sequence of three nucleotides in the gene.
