- The most effective shot is delivered to an animal's vital organs—heart and lungs. In large game animals, these organs lie in the chest cavity behind the front shoulder. A lung shot is the most effective shot for big game.
 - The aim of the vital organ shot creates major blood vessels and arteries. A deer in this area starts considerably bleeding. If the animal drops, it will have a blood trail that's easy to track.
 - Aside from being a good mechanism, the key to a clean kill is patience. Hunters should hunt them to the vital organs only. If you do not have a clean shot to the vital organs, wait until the animal makes the best possible shot.

The most big game, the starting spot is straight up from the back side of the front leg, one-third of the way up from the bottom of the chest. The animal will protrude the ribs but not the shoulder back, not until the rear leg is forward, and aim behind the shoulder.
- Quartering Away:
 - The quartering away that angle is when your target is facing away from you but at an angle. The animal is usually backing away from you.
 - Flareout: For heavier hunters, the quartering away position often occurs during open on all big game. The aim just behind the shoulder is the best aiming spot for direct penetration of the vital organs. From an facing the chest area above the uppermost front leg.
