Standardized Testing T. Kelleghan,George F. Madaus,P.W. Airasian,2012-12-06 When George Bernard Shaw wrote his play Pygmalion he could hardly have foreseen the use of the concept of the self fulfilling prophecy in debates about standardized testing in schools Still less could he have foreseen that the validity of the concept would be examined many years later in Irish schools While the primary purpose of the experimental study reported in this book was not to investigate the Pygmalion effect it is inconceivable that a study of the effects of standardized testing conceived in the 1960s and planned and executed in the 1970s would not have been influenced by thinking about teachers expectations and the influence of test information on the formation of those expectations While our study did pay special attention to teacher expectations its scope was much wider It was planned and carried out in a much broader framework one in which we set out to examine the impact of a standardized testing program not just on teachers but also on school practices students and students parents five leading academics in the areas under scrutiny and now revised and updated to create what is probably the most comprehensive overview and evaluation of research in primary education yet published. A particular feature is the prominence given to international and comparative perspectives. With an introduction from Robin Alexander the Review's director, the book is divided into eight sections covering children's lives and voices, school, home and community, children's development, learning, diversity and needs, aims, values and contexts for primary education, the structure and content of primary education, outcomes, standards and assessment in primary education, teaching in primary schools, structures and processes, teaching in primary schools, training, development and workforce reform, policy frameworks, governance, funding, reform and quality assurance. The Cambridge Primary Review Research Surveys is an essential reference tool for professionals, researchers, students and policy makers working in the fields of early years, primary and secondary education.
