Endocrine System: WORKING TOGETHER

Each organ system works on other systems within the body to do its "job". Our bodies learn just some of the ways that the endocrine system interacts with other organ systems.

Nervous System

Circulatory System

Endocrine System: FACTS

Endocrine System: PROBLEMS

Most of the time, the endocrine system works perfectly well. However, sometimes problems can arise.

Diabetes

Diabetes is a condition that causes high blood glucose (sugar) levels. It is caused by the body being unable to either produce or use the hormone insulin. So, the glucose in the blood gets stuck or "stuck". Symptoms include increased thirst, weight gain, changes in vision, frequent urination, changes in mood, numbness or tingling in the hands.

Endocrine System: KEY TERMS

Term	Definition
Endocrine System	Network of endocrine glands that make, store, and release hormones.
Hormones	Chemical messengers that carry information and instructions from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: HORMONES

Hormones are chemical signals. Hormones are released by a gland and travel in the blood to a target cell. When it gets there, it tells the target cell to do something. Hormones can be thought of as messengers that carry information from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: FIGHT-OR-FLIGHT

The fight-or-flight response is a reaction that occurs in the body when we are really frightened. The brain (fight-or-flight) recognizes the situation that our present situation had no danger. The brain sends signals to the endocrine system. They send out hormones that tell the body to get ready to fight or run away. The fight-or-flight response is triggered by the release of hormones that prepare the body to either stay and fight with a danger or to run away from it. In either case, the body's response to stress prepares us to deal with the danger.

Today, we do not usually have to fight or run away from a danger as the situation changes. However, our bodies still react in the same way when we sense danger as that only one. The diagram shows the hormones that are released and the effect that they have on the body.

Endocrine System: GLANDS

A gland is a structure that produces and releases substances that perform a specific function in the body. There are two types of glands: endocrine glands and exocrine glands. Endocrine glands release hormones into the blood. Exocrine glands release substances into a duct that leads out of the body. Endocrine glands include the thyroid, pituitary, and adrenal glands. Exocrine glands include the salivary glands, sweat glands, and the digestive system. The diagram shows the location and function of the major endocrine glands.

Endocrine System: FEEDBACK LOOPS

Endocrine activities are regulated by complex feedback loops. These feedback loops help the body maintain a balance. When a hormone is released, it tells the target cell to do something. The target cell then sends a signal back to the gland that released the hormone. This signal tells the gland to stop releasing the hormone. This is called a negative feedback loop. The diagram shows a feedback loop for the thyroid gland.

The glands react to hormone changes in the blood in the same way. The glands only release enough hormone to bring the blood back to normal. If the blood has too much hormone, the glands stop producing it for a while. If the blood has too little hormone, the glands start producing it again. This allows living organisms to maintain homeostasis.

Not all blood sugar changes are regulated by the feedback loops. In some cases, the blood sugar changes are caused by a person's diet. For example, if a person eats a lot of sugar, their blood sugar will rise. The pancreas releases insulin to help lower the blood sugar. If a person has diabetes, their pancreas does not release enough insulin. This causes their blood sugar to rise. The diagram shows a feedback loop for blood sugar.
