Wood Coffin Burial of Kinabatangan, Sabah (Penerbit USM) Stephen Chia, 2014-11-25 This book discusses the wood coffin burial tradition in Kinabatangan Valley Sabah Archaeological evidence from past and recent studies has shown that Kinabatangan Valley was the centre of the wood coffin burial tradition in Sabah Until now many limestone caves and rockshelters containing hundreds of wood coffins have been found along the Kinabatangan River Archaeological research and radiocarbon dating of the wood coffins suggested that the tradition of wood coffin burial in Kinabatangan Valley commenced as early as 1 000 years ago and is still being practised by the communities of Sungai and Murut living in the vicinity of the Kinabatangan Valley Universiti Sains Malaysia Penerbit Universiti Sains Malaysia Mansuli Valley, Lahad Datu, Sabah in the Prehistory of Southeast Asia (Penerbit USM) Jeffrey Abdullah, 2017 Mansuli Valley is one of the valleys that have the longest cultural sequence starting from 235 000 to 3 000 years ago This makes it the oldest valley in Borneo prehistory that has been dated chronometrically Now the prehistory of Sabah is almost in line in terms of age with other early prehistoric sites in Southeast Asia Mansuli Valley has also contributed to deeper understandings of the Palaeolithic culture particularly in Sabah and Southeast Asia generally in terms of the technological transformation of stone tools and the relationship with the environment especially with the fluctuations of sea level during the Pleistocene Epoch It has also been proved that the early human migration to Borneo had started at least in the middle of the Pleistocene Epoch This has indirectly proved that the changes of the sea level during the time play a critical role in the early human migration in Southeast Asia Moreover the environment and climate have also influenced the Palaeolithic societies that have led to their behavioural changes in terms of their technologies and adaptations
