respond to robots Are our emotional responses any less important when it comes to how the robots we encounter today are designed In How That Robot Made Me Feel Ericka Johnson asks the authors in this collection to critically examine our emotional and affective responses to robots and what such an examination would do to the way roboticists use or toy with our emotions in their design decisions The narrative arc of this anthology follows the question of just whose emotions are being engaged through robotic interactions why and for what design ends Of course the answer is that it is our emotions that are interesting And these emotions are not universal despite the historically universalist paradigm of AI and how robotic emotions work Emotions are contingent to borrow a commonly used phrase in feminist technoscience They are placed in space time and cultural context And understanding how they are produced and engaged with will help clarify many of the political aspects of robotic interaction that are currently concealed by the shiny and allegedly neutral surfaces of robots
