

PROTEIN SYNTHESIS

TRANSLATION

1. Translation is the process by which the genetic code is used to synthesize a protein. It occurs in the cytoplasm of the cell, where the mRNA is translated by ribosomes. The ribosome is composed of two subunits, a large subunit and a small subunit. The large subunit contains the ribosomal RNA (rRNA) and the ribosomal proteins. The small subunit contains the 16S rRNA and the ribosomal proteins. The ribosome is responsible for the assembly of the polypeptide chain.

2. During translation, the ribosome moves along the mRNA, reading the genetic code. The genetic code is a set of rules that defines how the sequence of nucleotides in the mRNA is translated into the sequence of amino acids in the protein. The ribosome uses transfer RNA (tRNA) molecules to bring the amino acids to the growing polypeptide chain. Each tRNA molecule has an anticodon that is complementary to a codon in the mRNA. The anticodon of the tRNA pairs with the codon of the mRNA, and the amino acid attached to the tRNA is added to the growing polypeptide chain.

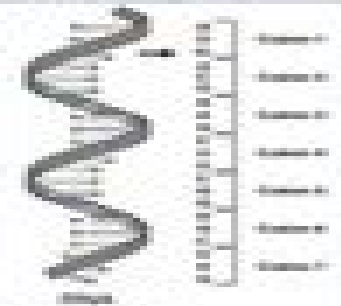

THE GENETIC CODE

"One codon at a time"

1. Biological systems use sequences of three nucleotides to specify the amino acids that are used to build proteins. These sequences are called codons. Each codon consists of three nucleotides, and each nucleotide consists of a sugar, a phosphate group, and a nitrogenous base. The sequence of bases in a codon determines which amino acid it codes for. For example, the codon AUG codes for the amino acid methionine.

2. During translation, the ribosome reads the mRNA in groups of three nucleotides, called codons. The ribosome uses transfer RNA (tRNA) molecules to bring the amino acids to the growing polypeptide chain. Each tRNA molecule has an anticodon that is complementary to a codon in the mRNA. The anticodon of the tRNA pairs with the codon of the mRNA, and the amino acid attached to the tRNA is added to the growing polypeptide chain.

"One gene - one protein"

1. Each gene contains a specific sequence of DNA bases. This sequence is called the gene's code. The gene's code is used to specify the sequence of amino acids in the protein that is synthesized from the gene. The sequence of bases in a gene determines the sequence of bases in the mRNA, which in turn determines the sequence of amino acids in the protein.
