

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of older adults with mild cognitive impairment (MCI). The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in the Mini-Mental State Examination (MMSE) score. Secondary outcomes included changes in the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI), the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS), the Geriatric Anxiety Inventory (GAI), and the Geriatric Symptom Scale (GSS). The MMSE score increased significantly in the intervention group compared to the control group. The BDI, GDS, GAI, and GSS scores also improved significantly in the intervention group. These findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with MCI.
