

ECC Exam 1 Study Guide

1. 3 domains of development

- Physical (weight, motor skills, reproductive...)
- Cognitive (intellectual, e.g., attention, memory, language, problem solving)
- Social & Emotional (Often in combination with another domain, e.g., a cognitive language delay may cause a strain on the social and emotional domain)

2. 5 themes

- 1. How do nature AND nurture interact to affect development?
 - Nature is genetic characteristics
 - Nurture is environmental (e.g., parents, religion, area of living, school size, ...)
 - Findings are important for parents and teachers because they create the environment, and policy makers because they can create programs and determine if our tax dollars cover it (e.g., head start program)
 - Epigenetics: experience affects gene expression; study of how environment impacts the expression of genes (e.g., chaotic family environment may draw out mental illness)
- 2. How do children shape their own development?
 - Child's traits/characteristics
 - Child-initiated activities/preferences
 - Choice of friends, environments, and activities
- 3. How does the social and cultural environment affect one's psychological development?
 - *this is different from #1 because there is no mention or tie to genetics
 - Single parent home? Poverty? Ethnic backgrounds and customs?
- 4. Is development continuous? (resulting from small, gradual, steady, quantitative advances?) Or is it discontinuous? (resulting from abrupt, dramatic reorganizations of some qualitative change)
 - Only applies to cognitive domain because it is growing and changing linearly
 - Research shows development is continuous and able to be quantified
 - Discontinuous would be development in stages (think Piaget, or a caterpillar abruptly metamorphosing into a butterfly)
- 5. Individual differences in human development
 - There is no "normal" age for a child to do something for the first time
 - Environment may play a role
 - Long-term effects?
 - Walking? None
 - Toilet-training? None
 - Reading? Yes. Typically learned K-1

3. What makes the measurement of a variable valid and reliable?

- Valid: if the tool or test measures what it is supposed to measure (e.g., sociograms are a valid way to measure popularity)
