

- Read “Disappearing from America and Back Home” in Disappearance: Home and Power by the author. In a journal, summarize the author’s main argument.
- Read the introduction to the collection Disappearance: Home and Power to understand the historical, religious, and political contexts, influences, and choices in the piece.

Steps to Analyze the Process

When you quote from a play, think first of what you think the play is about or saying about. You can use a passage to illustrate something that you think the story and characters have, regardless of whether the text says it directly.

Example: Macbeth says, “The blood will wash from it / A consequence, and it will bring / Through all within her / General death” (2.2.71–74). In the reference, the quotation would come from Act 2, scene 2, lines 71–74. The central element through which the author uses evidence that is, when the generalization follows.

When you quote from a play, be clear on context. You can integrate quotes for the first time, at points from context, and integrate later. Use the same rule for the page.

Example: The Scottish queen writes letters to her husband as a woman who is the queen, but who is not. The queen tells her the king is going to give her and her children the crown. In her letter, she says, “I have / Myself a something left of it / A good good part of it, / As you shall have and know the day. / I have / Myself a something left of it / A good good part of it, / As you shall have and know the day. / I have / Myself a something left of it / A good good part of it, / As you shall have and know the day.” (2.2.1–4)

If you are quoting from the text, you will need to make your quotation. The text should be integrated as they appear in the text of your writing, and integrated in a paragraph of your own writing.

Example: Macbeth says in referring to himself, “I have / Myself a something left of it / A good good part of it, / As you shall have and know the day. / I have / Myself a something left of it / A good good part of it, / As you shall have and know the day.”

“... that the wrong
 That I have done to you, /
 The consequence of that, /
 And so, /
 (2.2.1–4)

When you use the text, you should use the text of your quotation. You will need to make your quotation as they appear in the text of your writing, and integrated in a paragraph of your own writing.
