Wood Coffin Burial of Kinabatangan, Sabah (Penerbit USM) Stephen Chia, 2014-11-25 This book discusses the wood coffin burial tradition in Kinabatangan Valley Sabah Archaeological evidence from past and recent studies has shown that Kinabatangan Valley was the centre of the wood coffin burial tradition in Sabah Until now many limestone caves and rockshelters containing hundreds of wood coffins have been found along the Kinabatangan River Archaeological research and radiocarbon dating of the wood coffins suggested that the tradition of wood coffin burial in Kinabatangan Valley commenced as early as 1 000 years ago and is still being practised by the communities of Sungai and Murut living in the vicinity of the Kinabatangan Valley Universiti Sains Malaysia Penerbit Universiti Sains Malaysia Mansuli Valley, Lahad Datu, Sabah in the Prehistory of Southeast Asia (Penerbit USM) Jeffrey Abdullah, 2017 Mansuli Valley is one of the valleys that have the longest cultural sequence starting from 235 000 to 3 000 years ago This makes it the oldest valley in Borneo prehistory that has been dated chronometrically Now the prehistory of Sabah is almost in line in terms of age with other early prehistoric sites in Southeast Asia Mansuli Valley has also contributed to deeper understandings of the Palaeolithic culture particularly in Sabah and Southeast Asia generally in terms of the technological transformation of stone tools and the relationship with the environment especially with the fluctuations of sea level during the Pleistocene Epoch It has also been proved that the early human migration to Borneo had started at least in the middle of the Pleistocene Epoch This has indirectly proved that the changes of the sea level during the time play a critical role in the early human migration in Southeast Asia Moreover the environment and climate have also influenced the Palaeolithic societies that have led to their behavioural changes in terms of their technologies and adaptations

Late Prehistoric Human Remains in Semporna (Penerbit USM) Eng Ken Khong, The finding of prehistoric human remains in Sabah has been scarce until the discovery of two late Metal period burial sites in Semporna between years 2002 and 2007 i e Melanta Tutup and Bukit Kamiri Prior to this only a handful of human teeth found at Melanta Tutup Neolithic in 2002 2003 and later in 2005 at Gua Balambangan late Palaeolithic an island off the northern tip of Kudat While these teeth had provided ample information about the prehistoric people the discoveries of two burial sites at Semporna have provided several well preserved prehistoric human remains They provide a glimpse into these people s identity living conditions and environment This book takes the palaeoanthropological approach on the human remains and attempts to answer some questions we have about the past populations in Semporna Who were these people Did they eat well Did they suffer from any form of disease or injury These questions are answered by studying in detail the skeletal remains of our ancestors from Semporna Eng Ken Khong is currently a senior lecturer at the Centre for Global Archaeological Research based at Universiti Sains Malaysia He obtained a BSc in Forensic Science 2004 a MA in Archaeology 2009 and PhD in Biology Leeds specialised in archaeogenetics He worked as a Forensic Science Officer at the Forensic Medicine Department of General Hospital Ipoh 2004 2006 and General Hospital Penang 2007 2009 where he had
