

Pirates Past Noon

Before You Read

In Pirates Past Noon Jack and Annie have to survive the days of deserted islands and plundering pirates. Make a list of pirate words students know—for example, eye, lubber, hoist, mutinies, and plank. Work together to define the words. After reading the book, students can add to the list to see how their vocabulary from this time in history has grown!

After You Read

Hidden Treasures

(Language Arts)

Cap'n Bones was searching for buried treasure. Jack and Annie help him find the booty by reading a map and solving a riddle. Invite students to practice similar skills.

- Have each child bring in a small wrapped trinket from home (with permission).
- Let children hide their trinkets in the classroom. Have children write riddles that will lead to their "buried treasure."
- Roll up the riddles like parchment and distribute randomly to children. Let students solve the riddle to find the prize.

Pirate Ship Coordinates

(Math)

This twist on Battleship incorporates the use of the Cartesian coordinate system and makes learning about coordinates fun and unforgettable. Give children a copy of page 2. Have them cut out the ships and tape them to the grid (lining them up with the squares). Pair up students and have them sit back-to-back. Let them take turns calling out coordinates to locate each other's ships. They can mark successful guesses in one color and unsuccessful ones in another (or just record them on a separate sheet of paper).

Treasure Chest

(Math)

In the days of pirates, treasure chests could contain all sorts of valuable objects. Reinforce math skills with this treasure chest center.

- Decorate a small shoe box as a treasure chest. Stock it with trinkets (play coins, rings, necklaces, crowns, and so on). On the inside of the lid, make a key that shows what different treasures are worth—for example, ring: 25 cents.
- Invite students to scoop out some treasure and count up their booty. (The word booty refers to anything valuable that is taken from another ship or person, such as money and jewels.)
- Students can compare how much of each part of the treasure they find (3 rings, 5 coins, 2 necklaces), what the total value of each kind of treasure is, and what the overall value is.

Magic Tree House Research Guide

Pirates

by Will Osborne and Mary Pope Osborne
(Random House, 2001)

Extend learning with a trivia game. Let students use the research guide to find facts about pirates. Have them write a set of three or four related questions that increase in difficulty on one side of an index card. They can color code the questions by difficulty level (for example, easy: yellow; medium: green; difficult: blue), and write the answers on the back. Students can use the cards to quiz each other and learn more!
