

LX 1606

Vario navigation system

1 General

LX 1606 is a logical replacement of well known LX 1600. The functions meet all important features of LX 1600. The system philosophy has been slightly changed and the unit consists now of two units, one black box and a Vario unit. This configuration makes connection of interfaces much easier than before. The black box unit isn't part of the panel, so the benefit of LX 1600, only one 57 mm cut out remained. For direct control of vario unit one rotary switch with integrated push button is used. This makes also possible to operate LX 1606 as stand alone unit without PDA connected.

1.1 HW description

- Power is applied via two wires; the unit doesn't have on/off switch and therefore needs an external switch.
- Vario unit is connected via LX 485 system bus, there are two connectors situated on the back side of the unit. The not occupied connector can be used for secondary vario display or for LX Remote connection, as the unit can also be controlled by LX Remote-control stick.
- The rotary switch is connected via telephone type cable and 6P connectors; the plug is situated on the front side of LX 1606. The rotary switch is also equipped with a push button and this makes inputs very easy. The switch can be installed wherever in the cockpit. Using of rotary switch solution makes possible to operate LX 1606 also as stand alone. In that case Audio volume, MC, Ballast, Bugs and Vario filter can be adjusted by the knob.
- PDA output makes possible to connect PDA or PNA units, 5V power is also available. PDA port is bidirectional, so the commands can be also sent from PDA into LX 1606.
- GPS input is capable to receive NMEA data and is plug and play compatible to flight recorders which corresponds to IGC standard. There is also power for the recorder. An automatic baud rate adaptation function makes using of different GPS sources very easy.
