

Lab Report Format

Date:

Name:

Title

A whole page for a title is unnecessary and quite wasteful of paper. Put the title of your lab experiment at the top. Include your name, your group members' names, teacher's name, course and the date.

Purpose

Answer in a sentence or two, "what is the purpose of this experiment?"

Question

Write down a testable question, e.g. "How does string length affect the period of a pendulum?" or "What is the acceleration due to gravity in my school?" The general format is "how does independent variable affect dependent variable?"

Hypothesis

Use the format "If...then...because". E.g. "If the length of the string increases, then the period of the pendulum will increase because the object has to travel farther".

Experimental Design

What are you going to do in the experiment? Explain briefly, in a few sentences, what is the generalized procedure. State the independent, dependent and controlled variables.

Materials

List any and all materials you will need for the experiment (NOT the materials you needed to build your launcher). Use the proper name and include the number if you need multiples.

Scientific Drawing

Include a one-page scientific drawing of your apparatus that includes your projectile launcher, measuring devices, etc.

America's Lab Report National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Education, Board on Science Education, Committee on High School Laboratories: Role and Vision, 2006-01-20. Laboratory experiences as a part of most U.S. high school science curricula have been taken for granted for decades but they have rarely been carefully examined. What do they contribute to science learning? What can they contribute to science learning? What is the current status of labs in our nation's high schools as a context for learning science? This book looks at a range of questions about how laboratory experiences fit into U.S. high schools. What is effective laboratory teaching? What does research tell us about learning in high school science labs? How should student learning in laboratory experiences be assessed? Do all students have access to laboratory experiences? What changes need to be made to improve laboratory experiences for high school students? How can school organization contribute to effective laboratory teaching? With increased attention to the U.S. education system and student outcomes, no part of the high school curriculum should escape scrutiny. This timely book investigates factors that influence a high school laboratory experience, looking closely at what currently takes place and what the goals of those experiences are and should be. Science educators, school administrators, policy makers, and parents will all benefit from a better understanding of the need for laboratory experiences to be an integral part of the science curriculum and how that can be accomplished.

Composing A Care of the Self David Lee Carlson, James Albright, 2012-12-06. What do Germ Theory, self psychology, the entrepreneur, and the Bertillon Card have in common? They comprise a part of the historical dispositif for the emergence of the writing portfolio. This riveting Foucaultian-inspired genealogy travels through the history of medicine, criminality, psychology, political economics to reveal the epistemologies and practices of power/knowledge of the contemporary portfolio. In so doing, it challenges previous held beliefs about the germination of the secondary school, prevailing views of the dawning of secondary English as a discipline, and most important, the costs and effects of progressivist writing pedagogies and assessment instruments. Carlson and Albright offer fresh and far-ranging examinations of the rise and development of composition studies and assessment practices in U.S. secondary schools, thereby challenging major English education scholars' long-held interpretations of such. Composing a Care of the Self: A Critical History of Writing Assessment in Secondary English Education posits, for example, an elucidation of the history of writing assessment that I believe is most compelling and original, particularly in its analysis of historically dominant medical discourses and metaphors of the late 19th century and their influences on secondary English educators. Further, the authors, inspired by Foucault's uses of genealogy as a means to expose practices and rationalities of power/knowledge dynamics and their relations to matters of governance, dramatically advance theoretical orientations within the field of English Education. They do so through their intricate weaving of Foucauldian theoretical perspectives into analyses of crucial and yet often taken for granted forms and functions of composition studies and writing assessments in the secondary English classroom As such this book is a remarkable achievement Janet L Miller Ph D Professor Programs in English Education Teachers College Columbia University In COMPOSING A CARE OF THE SELF A CRITICAL HISTORY OF WRITING ASSESSMENT IN SECONDARY ENGLISH EDUCATION David Carlson and James Albright problematized secondary school assessment practices in the late nineteenth century and provide a fascinating genealogical study of English education Together and under the mantle of Foucaultian genealogy they explore the relationships among the body health and secondary education exploring how epistemology in medicine spread to educational discourse This is a highly readable account and one that disturbs the standard histories It is a highly recommended text for all those interested in the history of English studies and writing assessment Michael A Peters Professor Emeritus University of Illinois Professor Policy Cultural Social Studies in Education University of Waikato
