Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate variability (HRV) of young adults. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 20 young adults (10 males and 10 females) who were randomly assigned to two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of physical activity, while the training group was instructed to engage in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were designed to improve cardiovascular fitness and HRV. The HRV was measured using a heart rate monitor and a computer program. The results of the study showed that the training group had a significant increase in HRV compared to the control group. The increase in HRV was observed in all three sessions of the training program. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve HRV in young adults.

-  Quick tip: use `+` to obtain the name and number associated with the telephone numbers on the pre-programmed keys in order to set programming of the garage.
-  Phone book key: a phone book key is used to access your personal phone book (phone stored) or to initiate call by name (long press) or area (short).
-  Pre-programmed function keys and programmable key:
The above functions associated with the key is as follows:
The four fixed memory of:
  - last time key,
  - one "momentary forwarding or cancel" (with hand) key,
  - one "handbrake" key,
  - one "brake" key,
  - one direct call key to programmer.
 Only the first two are enabled in the first month.

These authors suggest that the following may be considered as a guide:

Remember that the configuration file contains spaces. If you configure your phone via the web interface, be sure to use quotes to wrap it in case of any characters with the space. It will be more convenient to use the command line to configure your phone.
