Education, Board on Human-Systems Integration, Panel on Human Factors in Air Traffic Control Automation, 1997-01-28 Despite the strong safety record of the national airspace system serious disruptions occasionally occur often as a result of outdated or failed equipment Under these circumstances safety relies on the skills of the controllers and pilots and on reducing the number of aircraft in the air The current and growing pressures to increase the capacity to handle a greater number of flights has led to a call for faster and more powerful equipment and for equipment that can take over some of the tasks now being performed by humans Increasing the role of automation in air traffic control may provide a more efficient system but will human controllers be able to effectively take over when problems occur This comprehensive volume provides a baseline of knowledge about the capabilities and limitations of humans relative to the variety of functions performed in air traffic control. It focuses on balancing safety with the expeditious flow of air traffic, identifying lessons from past air accidents. The book discusses the function of the national airspace system and the procedures for hiring, training, and evaluating controllers. Decisionmaking, memory, alertness, vigilance, sleep patterns during shift work, communication, and other factors in controllers' performance. Research on automation and human factors in air traffic control and incorporation of findings into the system. The Federal Aviation Administration's management of the air traffic control system and its dual mandate to promote safety and the development of air commerce. This book also offers recommendations for evaluation of the human role in automated air traffic control systems and for managing the introduction of automation into current facilities and operations. It will be of interest to anyone concerned about air safety: policymakers, regulators, air traffic managers, and controllers, airline officials, and passenger advocates.

Combining principles and practices from mechanical, electrical, and environmental engineering, this book enables you to analyze, design, implement, and test automatic wastewater aeration control systems and processes. It brings together all the process requirements, mechanical equipment, operations, instrumentation, and controls, carefully explaining how all of these elements are integrated into successful aeration control systems. Moreover, Aeration Control System Design features a host of practical state-of-the-technology tools for determining energy and process improvements, payback calculations, system commissioning, and more. Author Thomas E. Jenkins has three decades of hands-on experience in every phase of aeration control systems design and implementation. He presents not only the most current theory and technology but also practical tips and techniques that can only be gained by many years of experience. Inside the book, readers will find:

- Full integration of process, mechanical, and electrical engineering considerations.
- Alternate control strategies and algorithms that provide better performance than conventional proportional, integral, derivative control.
- Practical considerations and analytical techniques for system evaluation and design.
- New feedforward control technologies and advanced process monitoring systems.

Throughout the book, example problems based on field experience illustrate how the principles and techniques discussed in the book are used to create successful aeration control systems. Moreover, there are plenty of equations, charts, figures, and diagrams to support readers at every stage of the design and implementation process. In summary, Aeration Control System Design makes it possible for engineering students and professionals to design systems that meet all mechanical, electrical, and process requirements in order to ensure effective and efficient operations.

Asking that question, this is a critical review of how the design dimension of the Urban Renaissance strategy was developed and applied, based on expert academic assessments of progress in Britain's thirteen largest cities. The case studies are preceded by a dissection of New Labour's renaissance agenda and concluded by a
