

Overview:

- There are many possible lessons to teach about the Woodland Tribes. Teachers should select from the lessons below those that fit their time schedule and their students' interests. This lesson concentrates on how the environment shapes peoples' way of life, and how a group of people express that connection through legends. The emphasized skills include: writing a reflection, scaffolding, and incorporating documents into an essay. A parallel task mirroring the NYS English Language Arts Book 2 Listening and Writing activity is included.
