

ADAPTATIONS AND NATURAL SELECTION

Objective:

Simulate changes in moth population due to pollution and predation and observe how species can change over time.

Introduction:

Charles Darwin accumulated a tremendous collection of facts to support the theory of evolution by natural selection. One of his difficulties in demonstrating the theory, however, was the lack of an example of evolution over a short period of time, which could be observed as it was taking place in nature. Although Darwin was unaware of it, remarkable examples of evolution, which might have helped to persuade people of his theory, were in the countryside of his native England. One such example is the evolution of the peppered moth, Biston betularia.

The economic changes known as the industrial revolution began in the middle of the eighteenth century. Since then, tons of soot have been deposited on the countryside around industrial areas. The soot discolored and generally darkened the surfaces of trees and rocks. In 1848, a dark-colored moth was first recorded. Today, in some areas, 90% or more of the peppered moths are dark in color. More than 70 species of moth in England have undergone  $\frac{1}{2}$  change from light to dark. Similar observations have been made in other industrial nations, including the United States.

Instructions:

Click the link below to read more information on Kettlewell's study of moths. Go through the sections Peppered Moth, Natural Selection, Dr. Kettlewell, and How to Play, then Play. Run two simulations for 1 minute each, one with a light forest and one with a dark forest. You will play the part of a blue jay that eats moths. Repeat the simulations 2 more times (for a total of 6 simulations).

Natural selection in action

Peppered Moth

Before the peppered moth was first recorded in 1848, all in this area!

Natural Selection

After just two days the peppered moth population in England.

Dr. Kettlewell

Researchers found nearly four times as many dark moths on dark tree trunks as light moths on light tree trunks.
