Exam Practice Sesotho:

Handbook on the Teaching of Southern Sesotho Ramoshebi I. Maboee Moletsane, Carmella 'Mateboho Matsoso, 1985

In the Time of Cannibals David B. Coplan, 1994 The workers who migrate from Lesotho to the mines and cities of neighboring South Africa have developed a rich genre of sung oral poetry word music that focuses on the experiences of migrant life This music provides a culturally reflexive and consciously artistic account of what it is to be a migrant or part of a migrant's life It reveals the relationship between these Basotho workers and the local and South African powers that be the cannibals who live off of the workers labor David Coplan presents a moving collection of material that for the first time reveals the expressive genius of these tenacious but disenfranchised people Coplan discusses every aspect of the Basotho musical literature taking into account historical conditions political dynamics and social forces as well as the styles artistry and occasions of performance He engages the postmodern challenge to decolonize our representation of the ethnographic subject and demonstrates how performance formulates local knowledge and communicates its shared understandings Complete with transcriptions of full male and female performances this book develops a theoretical and methodological framework crucial to anyone seeking to understand the relationship between orality and literacy in the context of performance This work is an important contribution to South African studies to ethnomusicology and anthropology and to performance studies in general

Sesotho Farming Stephen D. Turner, 1978 It is postulated that agricultural development in third world countries cannot properly be appraised without an understanding of the farming knowledge and economic and cultural attitudes of those citizens whom it is supposed to benefit the factors which have moulded the contemporary individual's approach to farming must also be appreciated Physical factors affecting agriculture in the lowlands and foothills of Lesotho are therefore outlined the economic history of the Basotho nation is then discussed and the present contribution of agriculture to national subsistence noted It is argued that the farming sector is in decline but that it retains a vital role in the sustenance of most households Two aspects of cultural context are examined vernacular relationships with the landscape and the perceived role of cattle Contemporary Sesotho agricultural methods and farming knowledge are then outlined and the important social networks which sustain agricultural production are discussed In a broad analysis of Sesotho world view the individual's attitude to farming is located It is argued that the extent of farming knowledge the degree of interest in this activity and the needs problems and desired changes reported reflect an accurate appraisal of the role and actual potential of agriculture in Sesotho economy today The significance of this appraisal for rural development is then shown in a discussion of soil erosion and conservation in Lesotho The analysis is expanded to consider the policies of government and aid projects in other areas of agriculture It is concluded that these are more likely to meet with success where they reinforce the supplementary subsistence role farming is still expected to fulfil more ambitious initiatives may not correspond with realistic Sesotho expectations in this sector
