Hicks, 2015-10-01 This study examines the potential for a federated defense approach to U S action in the Middle East the constraints to closer military cooperation in the region and specific capability areas that would benefit from federated defense Stabilizing the Middle East requires continued attention and investment from the United States and its global allies and partners Federated defense involves building partner capabilities in a way that shares the burden of providing security in a more effective and efficient manner Federated defense would over time create partner capabilities that augment and complement U S capabilities Doing so requires identifying discrete areas of cooperation between the United States and its allies and partners that would leverage partner capabilities in pursuing common security objectives

U.S. Defense Posture in the Middle East Seth G. Jones,Seamus P. Daniels,2022-07-18 There are growing calls for a decrease in the U S military presence in the Middle East

This CSIS report assesses three posture options for U S forces in the region to inform the debate over the United States military presence in the Middle East The report finds that the United States should keep a notable but tailored presence in the Middle East to contain the further expansion of Chinese and Russian military power and to check the actions of Iran and terrorist organizations that threaten the United States and its allies and partners The 1990s Richard L Grant,1991

Paperbound Books in Print ,1991 Australia-Japan-U.S. Maritime Cooperation Andrew Shearer,2016 The Federated Defense Project aims to assess and recommend concrete ways for the United States and its partners to integrate their defense capabilities in support of shared interests Within this framework this report seeks to make the case for significantly deeper trilateral maritime cooperation among Australia Japan and the United States and proposes a series of initiatives to achieve this objective Expanding trilateral maritime cooperation will require policy decisions in the three capitals that at times will take each partner out of their comfort zone It will require political courage cultural change in the respective defense forces and bureaucracies and sustained high level engagement over decades But the stakes are high and the need for action is increasingly urgent Rebuilding the Arsenal of Democracy: The U.S. and Chinese Defense Industrial Bases in an Era of Great Power Competition Seth G. Jones,Alexander Palmer,2024-05-06 China s defense industrial base is operating on a wartime footing while the U S defense industrial base is largely operating on a peacetime footing Overall the U S defense industrial ecosystem lacks the capacity responsiveness flexibility and surge capability to meet the U S military s production and warfighting needs Unless there are urgent changes the United States risks weakening deterrence and undermining its wartime capabilities China is heavily investing in munitions and acquiring high end weapons systems and equipment five to six times faster than the United States China is also the world s largest shipbuilder and has a shipbuilding capacity that is roughly 230 times larger than the United States One of China s large shipyards such as Jiangnan Shipyard has more capacity than all U S shipyards combined U.S. Defense Posture in the Middle East Seth G. Jones,Seamus P. Daniels,2022-07-18 There are growing calls for a decrease in the U S military presence in the Middle East This CSIS report assesses three posture options for U S forces in the region to inform the debate over the United States military presence in the Middle East The report finds that the United States should keep a notable but tailored presence in the Middle East to contain the further expansion of Chinese and Russian military power and to check the actions of Iran and terrorist organizations that threaten the United States and its allies and partners "AN INDEPENDENT PERSPECTIVE OF U.S. DEFENSE POLICY IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION".
