

I The PPF curve shows that there is no opportunity cost of producing more goods from the same factors and technological improvements don't impact the cost of producing. It is an efficient economy and has low costs.

C The economy also experiences net factor mobility, meaning all capital can move between the two sectors and labour is not specialised.

D Capital is mobile, this means it can produce different goods at different prices.

E Labour and capital are immobile between industries.

F There does have to be a specialisation of factors, capital will want to move away.

G PPF is the PPF because we see the Production Possibility Frontier.

H Capital is specialised, meaning it produces one type of good.

I Labour is specialised by their production skills and not other types.

J Prices are increasing exponentially because Specialising means different goods.

K Labour is specialised, meaning there are different production functions within one good.

L PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

M PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

N PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

O PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

P PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

Q PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

R PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

S PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

T PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

U PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

V PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

W PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

X PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

Y PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

Z PPF shows the maximum output that can be produced by fully utilising all factors available.

I Capital has a higher opportunity cost than labour, so the PPF is concave. It is not convex, as convexity would mean that the PPF is straight.
