Architectural Detailing Patrick Rand, Jason Miller, Edward Allen, 2024-09-02 The industry standard guide to designing well performing buildings Aesthetics are a vital part of good design Great design emerges from a deep understanding of the functionality and constructability of details Good details provide clear complete and correct information to the wide variety of users that need them Architects guide a project from design idea to buildable reality by working with other building industry professionals and creating a set of details that show how things are put together Architectural Detailing systematically describes the principles for designing good architectural details Using patterns that demonstrate best practices and consistent approaches to design detailing this book teaches why detailing is important what factors shape detailing issues and how to detail a building that meets or exceeds performance requirements Extensive illustrations demonstrate how to design building details that will not leak water or air will control the flow of heat and water vapor will adjust to all kinds of movement and will be easy to construct This fourth edition has been updated to conform to the latest International Building Codes and International Energy Conservation Code requirements and incorporates current knowledge about new material and construction technology including Expanded patterns for sustainability high performance architecture and resilience Examples using panelized or modularized prefabricated building assemblies Complex case studies demonstrating the detailing design process for energy efficient structures Design detailing for maintenance and management of sensitive or weak spots in a building assembly Architectural Detailing helps you bring a building together with a well detailed design that communicates effectively at all levels of the construction process

Guide for Use of Wood Preservatives in Historic Structures Stan T. Lebow, 2012 This document provides guidance on wood preservation options in the context of historic preservation Preserving wooden building materials is critical to historic preservation practitioners Biodeterioration can be minimized through design construction practices maintenance and if necessary by use of wood preservatives Moisture is the primary cause of biodeterioration and if exposure to moisture cannot be prevented the application of preservatives or use of pressure treated wood may be warranted The Secretary of Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties emphasize retaining the historic character of a property including distinctive materials features and spatial relationships Existing conditions should be carefully evaluated to determine the appropriate level of intervention Wood preservatives are generally grouped into two categories preservatives used for in place field remedial treatment and preservatives used for pressure treatments A limitation of in place treatments is that they cannot be forced deeply into the wood under pressure However they can be applied into the center of large wooden members via treatment holes These preservatives may be available as liquids rods or pastes Pressure treated wood has much deeper and more uniform preservative penetration than wood treated with other methods The type of pressure treated wood is often dependent on the requirements of the specific application To guide selection of pressure treated wood the American Wood Protection Association developed Use Category System standards Other preservative characteristics such as color odor and surface oiliness may also be relevant Guidelines for selection and application of field treatments and for selection and specification of pressure treated wood are provided in this document
