School Lunch Recipes for Main Dishes and Desserts, 1953 For Luncheon and Supper Guests Alice Alice Bradley, James Zimmerhoff, 2017-09-26

Introduction Meals of many courses are neither practical nor popular with the modern hostess For a company luncheon or supper it is not necessary to serve more than a hot dish a salad a biscuit or sandwich a dessert and a beverage A first course and a relish may be provided if desired

Sunday Night Suppers The following menus were arranged especially as Sunday night suppers but they are equally suitable for midday luncheons or high teas Many of the dishes will be found desirable for afternoon teas or evening spreads and for use in tea and lunch rooms and for automobile picnics

Preliminary Preparations Preparations for Sunday night suppers should be made on Saturday as far as possible For a luncheon it is a help to have some things done the day before For picnics and parties much must be done in advance As an aid to the hostess we have listed after each menu what these preliminary preparations may be

Cooking at the Table Many of the hot dishes may be prepared in a chafing dish or on an electric grill For these much of the measuring may be done in advance the ingredients being put in small dishes on a tray Coffee and tea may be made at the table with electric appliances

Sandwiches and Biscuits Sandwiches may be made and wrapped first in dry cheesecloth then in damp cheesecloth and placed in a covered crock some hours before a meal The hot biscuits may be replaced by rolls or bread and butter if desired

Automobile Picnics For picnics the beverages and hot dishes may be prepared at home and carried in thermos food jars The cold dishes may be packed in a small portable refrigerator The biscuits sandwiches cakes and cookies should be carefully wrapped in wax paper and packed in boxes Ice creams may be taken in the freezer Hot sandwiches and bacon may be cooked over the coals or on a portable oil or alcohol stove In some menus it may be desirable to omit or modify a few of the dishes if food is to be carried several miles

Market Orders Supplies for use on Sunday evening should of course be purchased on Saturday To prevent any mistakes in ordering we have listed under each menu the foodstuffs that will be required

Supplies that are usually kept on hand are not listed as Baking powder Cayenne Cornstarch Bread flour Pastry flour Molasses Mustard Paprika Pepper Rock salt Table salt Granulated sugar Soda Spices whole and ground Table sauce Vanilla Vinegar

How to Buy Some things are listed in the market orders that many people always have on hand This is for the benefit of those who do not prepare all their meals and have little space for seldom used supplies As far as feasible the amounts of material in the market orders are such as could be purchased They may differ somewhat from the amounts called for in the recipes thus leaving some foodstuff on hand In many cases it may be more economical to purchase in larger quantities than those given In some cases smaller amounts are called for than can be purchased as one half can or one fourth cup in case supplies on hand are adequate without purchasing more than required Butter only is given in the market orders In cooking margarine lard and other shortenings may be used instead if preferred Measurements In all recipes measurements are made level Measuring cups divided into thirds and quarters are used and tea and table measuring spoons Cups of dry material are filled to overflowing by putting the material into the cup with a tablespoon and are then leveled off with a knife Tea and tablespoons are filled heaping with dry material and then leveled off with a knife Flour should be sifted once before measuring A Book of Valuable Recipes for Dinner Parties and Formal Occasions Annie Reilly, 1923 School Lunch Recipes for 25 and 50 United States.
