

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number and then randomly selects a name from the names placed in bowls for each group. The name that is called reads the problem, and that person then uses an alternative to the problem to help understand how to solve it. Each member frequently shares the answer to their assignment.

Afterward, the class discusses each set with details, and the class reads the group-generated, edited, and simplified version for average student understanding. The group that did not select their member to be selected spending the time on the problem reading about others' understanding of the problem.

The teacher takes 10 minutes per assignment, allows the students some quiet work, and the teacher monitors for the students. The class reads the student's solution, makes minor corrections, and discusses the solution, spending the time explaining additional concepts that were not fully covered during the first period. Each group explains answering those through questions.

After class, bring the students and explain the assignment and the student's solution, giving them an idea of what the teacher wanted and suggest the student's solution.

The next day, a new assignment is given to the class, and the students are given a new assignment. The teacher will be able to explain the student's solution to the class.

The teacher will be able to explain the student's solution.

The teacher will be able to explain the student's solution.

ANSWER EXPLANATION: The first group of the group that was given the problem will be able to explain the student's solution.
