- Directions: Read each item carefully and select the response that best describes the item. Record the appropriate response number (1-4) next to each item using a pencil or ballpoint pen.
1. The original author and publisher/producer is the only one who can create your initial response to their copyright concerns.
2. Copyright law does not require an individual to use the Internet or any of the Internet. It only requires you share or distribute from the Internet or within the Internet.
3. Make this your intention to use a student's work, such as a video, only for their learning in the classroom or for their group of friends.
4. Please note that in your effort to share or to create new or to "re-use" information on the Internet, you should always give credit to the original source of the information (e.g., author, publisher, or creator).
5. Copyright law does not require you to use the Internet or any of the Internet. It only requires you share or distribute from the Internet or within the Internet.

The system is designed to estimate a person's self-reported A1C levels and the need for insulin. It estimates the value for any other glucose reading. "You could imagine this being the first step toward a more personal, more individualized approach to A1C testing," he says. "It's almost like, 'You have certain facts about your body, so let's estimate it.' Other than that, it's really just the math." The built-in algorithm actually feeds into an insulin flow time algorithm, designed to "simulate the effects of an insulin pump using the value you've entered in a blood test," he says.
