Abstract: In the temperature range 100–150°C, the degradation of poly(2-vinylpyridine) was studied. The degradation was found to be first order with respect to the concentration of the polymer. The activation energy of the degradation was found to be 100 kJ/mol.

The degradation of the polymer is also affected by the presence of oxygen, which can lead to the formation of free radicals and the subsequent degradation of the polymer (Kawakami et al. 1995, 2001).

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The participants were divided into two groups: a training group and a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured using a 6-minute walk test, a 10-minute step test, and a 10-minute sit-to-stand test. HRQL was measured using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher physical fitness and HRQL than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged men.
