Tramontana, Stephen R. Hooper, 2013-11-21 Neuropsychology has its roots in clinical neurology Reading case descriptions by 19th century neurologists such as Wernicke's painstakingly detailed examinations of patients with the aphasic symptom complex makes it obvious that neuropsychology is not a new discipline Even the marriage with psychology is not new the neurologist Arnold Pick for example was fully conversant with the developments in contemporary psychological as well as linguistic research However the primary focus of 19th and early 20th century psychology was on general psychology and only a small number of psychologists ventured into what then was called differential psychology the psychology of individual differences including a few who became attached to neurological research and rehabilitation units after World War I It remained until World War II for psychologists to establish a more solid working relationship with neurology What psychology had to offer to neurology was its experimental skill the development of a sophisticated methodology and for clinical work the development of psychometrics On the whole the marriage between the two disciplines has been fruitful leading to new insights models and discoveries about brain behavior relationships documented in several textbooks which appeared in rapid succession since the 1960s In clinical practice neuropsychology has been inventive in some respects in others merely introducing psychometric rigor to already existing neurological examinations As described in greater detail in this book developmental neuropsychology is of even more recent origin

Teaching on Assessment Sharon L. Nichols, Divya Varier, 2021-03-01 In an age where the quality of teacher education programs has been called into question it is more important than ever that teachers have a fundamental understanding of the principles of human learning motivation and development Theory to Practice Educational Psychology for Teachers and Teaching is a series for those who teach educational psychology in teacher education programs At a time when educational psychology is at risk of becoming marginalized it is imperative that we as educators walk our talk in serving as models of what effective instruction looks like Each volume in the series draws upon the latest research to help instructors model fundamental principles of learning motivation and development to best prepare their students for the diverse multidimensional uncertain and socially embedded environments in which these future educators will teach The inaugural volume Teaching on Assessment is centered on the role of assessment in teaching and learning Each chapter translates current research on critical topics in assessment for educational psychology instructors and teacher educators to consider in their teaching of future teachers Written for practitioners the aim is to present contemporary issues and ideas that would help teachers engage in meaningful assessment practice This volume is important not only because of the dwindling presence of assessment related instructional content in teacher preparation programs but also because the policy changes in the last two decades have transformed the meaning and use of assessment in K 12 classrooms Praise for Teaching on Assessment This thought provoking book brings together perspectives from educational psychology and teacher education to examine how assessment can best support student motivation engagement and learning In the volume editors Nichols and Varier present a set of chapters written by leaders in the field to examine critical questions about how to best prepare teachers to make instructional decisions understand assessment within the context of learning and motivation theory and draw on assessment in ways which can meet the needs of diverse learners Written in a highly accessible language and style each chapter contains clear takeaway messages designed for educational psychologists teacher educators teachers and pre service teachers This book is essential reading for anyone involved in teaching or developing our future teaching professionals Lois R Harris Australian Catholic University This impressive book provides a wealth of contemporary and engaging resources ideas and perspectives that educational psychology instructors will find relevant for helping students understand the complexity of assessment decision making as an essential component of instruction Traditional assessment principles are integrated with contemporary educational psychology research that will enhance prospective teachers decision making about classroom assessments that promote all students learning and motivation It is unique in showing how to best leverage both formative and summative assessment to boost student engagement and achievement enabling students to understand how to integrate practical classroom constraints and realities with current knowledge about self regulation intrinsic motivation and other psychological constructs that assessment needs to consider The chapters are written by established experts who are able to effectively balance presentation of research and theory with practical applications Notably the volume includes very important topics rarely emphasized in other assessment texts including assessment literacy frameworks diversity equity assessment strategies for students with special needs and data driven decision making The book will be an excellent supplement for educational psychology classes or for assessment courses introducing students to current thinking about how to effectively integrate assessment with instruction James McMillan Virginia Commonwealth University Learning Disability Subtyping Stephen R. Hooper, W. Grant Willis, 2013-11-11 The publication of this very important volume comes at a timely juncture in the history of learning disabilities The focus of this volume is on developing a multidisciplinary understanding of the complexities of the research on learning disabilities and its various sUbtypes It also will serve as an important compendium of the subtyping literature particularly with respect to pertinent issues of nosology specific sUbtotyping models neuro psychological diagnosis and treatment As the authors so correctly suggest the differential diagnosis of learning disabilities subtypes is a critical first step in developing theoretically sound programs of psychoeducational intervention Clearly one must have some idea about the general abilities of a child before realistic expectations can be charted Also how can one plan a program of intervention without some knowledge of the deficient components of achievement within a do main Does it not make both conceptual and practical sense to identify an individual s relative strengths and weaknesses so that abilities or strengths can be utilized to optimize functioning in areas of deficit Although these all sound like reasonable precursors to assisting individuals in need of academic assistance there are those who would argue otherwise Impor tantly however the Director of the National Institutes of Health in a recent report to Congress advocates exactly what this volume proposes Indeed there are important needs to be addressed and the literature reviewed herein strongly supports the conclusions drawn by these authors Handbook of Early Intervention for Autism Spectrum Disorders Dennis R.
