V. Holt, 2003 Reproduction is essential to the continuation and evolution of life on this planet and is therefore a centrally important process in the conservation of wildlife However reproductive mechanisms are well understood in only a handful of vertebrate species mostly domestic livestock and laboratory animals This means that attempts to develop and implement management policies for wildlife conservation and especially for endangered species that by definition are difficult to study are often based on poor data or no data at all In Reproductive Science and Integrated Conservation leading authorities provide glimpses of reproductive diversity in fishes amphibia reptiles birds and mammals Conservation plans are founded on the assumption that reproduction will be successful but what if it fails This book reviews the many factors that influence reproduction including genetics behaviour and nutrition and experts assess the potential conservation relevance of the recent rapid advances in reproductive technology and medicine     Science John Michels (Journalist), 2006 A weekly record of scientific progress     Resources in Education , 1978     An Ecological Framework for Marine Fishery Investigations J. F. Caddy, Gary D. Sharp, 1986-01-01 The text is intended as supplementary reading for fisheries workers especially in developing countries who do not always have ready access to current literature on applied marine ecology An attempt is made to develop a wide range of concepts in a form that will hopefully encourage their incorporation into a practical decision making context The food web and associated trophic interactions form the principal theme in an approach that gives equal emphasis to qualitative as well as the less easily measured quantitative considerations An attempt is made to illustrate the consequences of the aggregated nature of much of marine production as well as the subsequent dispersal of production in space and time and how these processes affect the potential for economic harvest of commercial components of the ecosystem Separate sections touch on environmental influences on production relevant spatial and temporal scales for ecosystem analysis life history strategies diversity and stability the concepts of the ecological niche the community and the assemblage and outline some first steps towards quantifying production in marine ecosystems Different approaches to representing trophic and other interactions are discussed with examples from the literature Reference is made to several ecological subsystems in order to illustrate the main concepts presented These include the mangrove ecosystem the arcto boreal macrophyte community a mediterranean demersal fish assemblage and the oceanic ecosystem associated with high seas tuna stocks In practical terms it is concluded that the first and simplest approach to multispecies resource management is not necessarily the manipulation of individual food web components but the identification mapping and conservation of critical habitats especially centres of local production and their associated ecological dissipation structures Hormones and Economic Behavior Pablo Brañas-Garza,Levent Neyse,Martin Voracek,Ulrich Schmidt,Monica Capra,2019-01-29

Behavioral correlates of hormones emphasized by psychologists have captured the attention of economists in the past years Behavioral economists in particular have investigated the possible roles of hormones on economic decision making and behavior as well as social preferences and cognitive abilities Testosterone oxytocin dopamine serotonin and stress hormones are the foremost studied ones in economic contexts Yet the results are mixed and the relationship between hormones and economic behavior is under investigated to this date Hormone levels are measurable and manipulatable e g activate de activate block The fact that the behavioral economics also employs experimental methodology makes it possible to observe both correlational and causal relationships between hormones and economic behavior Since numerous environmental social and biological factors interact with hormone fluctuations capturing the true impacts of hormones on decisions and behavior is challenging Manipulating hormone levels in the body is a method that is used to tackle this issue Such studies compare observed behaviors of hormones or placebo administrated participants to determine causal relationships This Research Topic welcomes the studies on the direct or indirect correlates of hormones on economic behavior and decision making to create new insights on the economic consequences of endocrine activity Selected References on Environmental Quality as
