be influenced by hearing impairments and the use of hearing aids and cochlear implants. These factors likely require a listener to optimize the use of binaural cues through learning and to use plastic changes in the nervous system to perform the optimization. Great strides have been made in understanding binaural processing in normal and impaired auditory systems. This Research Topic aims to highlight some of the latest findings in the following areas:

- 1 Animal behavioral and human psychoacoustical studies of binaural hearing
- 2 Neural encoding and processing of binaural cues and structural as well as neurophysiological bases of such encoding and processing
- 3 Contribution of binaural neural processing to auditory functions such as sound source localization, binaural fusion, binaural interference, spatial release from masking, auditory grouping, and auditory stream segregation
- 4 Computational models of binaural processing
- 5 Learning and plastic changes in binaural processing following hearing loss or alterations of acoustic environment and structural as well as physiological bases of these behavioral changes
- 6 Clinical aspects of binaural processing including application of processing strategies including research on the benefits of bilateral cochlear implantation and the neural correlates thereof
