

AN ABSTRACT OF THE THESIS OF
John Jian Yang for the degree of Master of Science in Electrical and Computer Engineering presented on February 2, 1988. Title: A High-Swing CMOS
Operational Amplifier Topology.

Abstract approved: Redacted for privacy
David J. Allstot

A circuit topology for high-swing, high-linearity CMOS operational amplifiers has been developed. The technique uses parallel-connected p- and n-channel input pairs to realize an input common-mode voltage range nearly equal to the total power supply voltage. High linearity is achieved by summing the DC bias and AC small-signal currents so that the small voltage gain is, to a first order, constant over the full common-mode voltage range. The technique has been applied to two-stage and cascode CMOS operational amplifiers.
