Graphs as Structural Models Erhard Godehardt, 2013-03-09 The advent of the high speed computer with its enormous storage capabilities enabled statisticians as well as researchers from the different topics of life sciences to apply multivariate statistical procedures to large data sets to explore their structures More and more methods of graphical representation and data analysis are used for investigations These methods belong to a topic of growing popularity known as exploratory data analysis or EDA In many applications there is reason to believe that a set of objects can be clustered into subgroups that differ in meaningful ways Extensive data sets for example are stored in clinical cancer registers In large data sets like these nobody would expect the objects to be homogeneous The most commonly used terms for the class of procedures that seek to separate the component data into groups are cluster analysis or numerical taxonomy The origins of cluster analysis can be found in biology and anthropology at the beginning of the century The first systematic investigations in cluster analysis are those of K Pearson in 1894 The search for classifications or typologies of objects or persons however is indigenous not only to biology but to a wide variety of disciplines Thus in recent years a growing interest in classification and related areas has taken place Today we see applications of cluster analysis not only to biology but also to such diverse areas as psychology regional analysis marketing research chemistry archaeology and medicine
