

"THE JAM GAG" AN ILLUSTRATED GUIDE

Hey! Are you tired of flimsy cloth gags that don't do anything? Do the layers slip or come untied? Noisy sub getting you down?

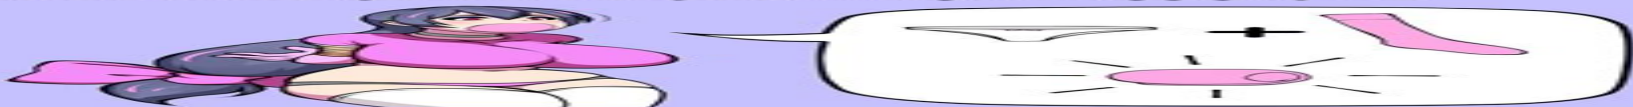

Well, there for you guys know I fucking love layered cloth gags. Not only do I draw them, but I actually use them in real life. And after many hours of them, research, and a few more tests, what does come out is a gag that is particularly like it's an old standby, on which I've unintentionally stumbled upon the "Jam Gag".

Before you start, you will of course, need cloth for this. Ideally, you want to make your own bandage or jersey for this. Make sure your bandages are big enough for material to go over the top of the gag. The material is also important. It should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

I've made bandages out of old t-shirts, and they work fine. If you want an aesthetically pleasing gag, you can use a piece of fabric that is a solid color, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

Anyway, let's get started. First and foremost is MOUTH PACKING! Anything soft will do for this, as long as there's nothing that might slide down the throat. In my videos, I use a piece of cloth that is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

First, stuff a pair of panties (or other piece of fabric of comparable size) into a sock. Anything soft will do for this, as long as there's nothing that might slide down the throat. In my videos, I use a piece of cloth that is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

This type of mouth packing works sort of like a large ballgag; when putting it in, it helps to push it up a bit of the throat. It's important to make sure the gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

Next, take a piece of cloth, and roll it up into a ball. The ball should be soft, and have a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The ball should be soft, and have a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

This is what I call a "high OTM" or "HOTM". With a typical OTM gag tied at the back of the head, the gag is pulled up into the mouth. The gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

Now for a normal OTM (or more, if you're really drawn to it). The gag is pulled up into the mouth. The gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

Next: OTM! Yeah buddy.

A quick tangent: When drawing, if I want the gag to look nice and big, one thing I'll do is have the gag look like it's a bit of the mouth. The more dramatic this angle is, the more it will look like a gag. You'll notice that nearly all of my pics with really big gags have this to some degree.

Now let's add a headscarf. These are awesome. In addition to squeezing the jaws "shut" around the packing, a headscarf will also help keep the other layers from slipping. Have the headscarf look like it's a bit of the mouth. The more dramatic this angle is, the more it will look like a gag.

Then to make sure the headscarf stays put, let's put another OTN on top of that. The headscarf should be feeling pretty well-muffled by this point, but we're not done yet!

Let's add one last OTN layer for good measure. Nice.

Can this be used in a more... large... way? The cloth collar remains unsecured.

It's vital that you have it: The Jam Gag. It's a gag that is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.

Anyway, that should cover it. The gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture. The gag is soft, and has a good texture. The fabric should be soft, solid color, and have a good texture.
