

Expository Writing

Expository writing is informational writing. It often times explains how or tells why about a topic.

Characteristics of Expository Writing

Introduction	Expository writing needs an introduction. The introduction introduces the reader to the topic and states the main idea, thesis statement, or topic sentence.
Facts and Details	The body of expository writing includes facts and details. Each paragraph should have a topic sentence or main idea and then 3-4 supporting sentences that give details and examples about the main idea.
Conclusion	Expository writing needs a conclusion. This is the final paragraph and it gives the author one more opportunity to state the main idea.
Organization	Strong authors will use one of the non-fiction text structures to help organize their writing (problem and solution, compare and contrast, description, sequence, cause and effect).

The author's purpose of expository writing is to inform.

Upper Elementary Reading Lessons Marilyn J. Chambliss, Linda Valli, 2011-07-16 Engaging students in worthwhile learning requires more than a knowledge of underlying principles of good teaching It demands considerable practice as well as images of what good teaching in particular situations and for particular purposes might look like This volume provides these images These cases were written from authentic unrehearsed lessons taught by upper elementary classroom teachers to diverse groups of real students in intact classrooms Each lesson contains elements of sound instructional practice from which both preservice and in service teachers can benefit Cases are not meant to be ideal but rather to evoke ways of seeing and thinking about good classroom instruction for all learners Accompanied by analytic commentaries from experts representing a particular perspective such as special education and ESOL these unrehearsed cases are written with the understanding that teaching is complex and multi dimensional The cases are drawn from a four year study of 4th and 5th grade mathematics instruction of culturally diverse classrooms with relatively high rates of students from low income families

Talking Texts Rosalind Horowitz, 2017-09-25 This volume examines how oral and written language function in school learning and how oral texts can be successfully inter connected to the written texts that are used on a daily basis in schools Rather than argue for the prominence of one over the other the goal is to help the reader gain a rich understanding of how both might work together to create a new discourse that ultimately creates new knowledge Talking Texts Provides historical background for the study of talk and text Presents examples of children s and adolescents natural conversations as analyzed by linguists Addresses talk as it interfaces with domains of knowledge taught in schools to show how talk is related to and may be influenced by the structure language and activities of a specific discipline Bringing together seminal lines of research to create a cohesive picture of discourse issues germane to classrooms and other learning settings this volume is an essential resource for

Parr, 2021-05-27

This book contributes to the innovation of writing education and research globally by providing crucial insights into how the structures and aims of literacy curricula vary internationally. It examines how nine education systems across five continents represent good writing in curricula that shape students' experiences learning to write in school. The book presents curricular analyses aimed at providing insight into how writing development can be better supported through innovative policy and research. The findings regarding international variation are presented under three broad dimensions: social and contextual factors that shape writing curricula; the discourses of writing reflected in curricula and official documents and hallmarks of classroom practice including the relationship with official discourse. Case study chapters present integrated inductive and deductive document analyses, findings of which are compared in a concluding cross case analysis chapter. Offering a detailed comparative analysis of writing research, International Perspectives on Writing Curricula and Development will be of great interest to academics, researchers and students in the fields of education, literacy and curriculum studies. It will also be relevant reading for policymakers and curriculum designers. Chapters 1, 7, 9, 10 and 11 of this book are freely available as downloadable Open Access PDFs at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4.0 license. The Psychology of Reading Insup Taylor, M. Martin Taylor, 2013-09-17. The Psychology of Reading provides a fair and coherent overall picture of how reading is done and how it is best taught. It aims to relate reading to writing systems, analyze the process of reading from several viewpoints using research from diverse disciplines and develop a model of reading to explain reading processes all the way from letter recognition to reading whole texts. The book describes how children learn to read in different scripts by different methods and at different ages. It discusses different components of reading: eye movements, letter and word recognition, sentence and prose reading and so on in beginning readers, skilled or unskilled readers as well as dyslexic readers. Brain damaged patients with selective impairment of different components provide a natural laboratory to compare reading processes within one script as well as across different scripts. The more types of readers, scripts and components examined, the better the picture of reading processes drawn. This book is a text for college students as well as a reference book for professionals in psychology, education, linguistics and other related fields.
