Abstract: This study seeks to be a first step in understanding the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of the telephone. The study is based on data from the 1996 Survey of the Internet and the Telephone. The results show that the use of the Internet and the telephone are related, but the relationship is not as strong as one might expect. The results also show that the use of the Internet and the telephone are related to the use of other communication technologies.
