Question 9 (10 marks)

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand the preferences and behaviors of potential customers. Once a need is identified, the next step is to develop a concept that addresses this need. This concept should be innovative and differentiated from existing products in the market.

2. After developing a concept, the next step is to create a prototype. This allows the development team to visualize the product and test its functionality. The prototype is typically made from a material that is easy to work with, such as wood or plastic, and is used to demonstrate the basic features of the product. This step is crucial for identifying any design flaws or functional issues before moving forward with production.

3. Once a prototype is created, the next step is to conduct a feasibility study. This study evaluates the technical, financial, and market viability of the product. It involves assessing the resources required for production, the potential costs, and the likelihood of the product being accepted by the market. This study helps to determine whether the product is worth pursuing and provides valuable insights into the challenges that may be encountered during the production process.

4. After completing the feasibility study, the next step is to develop a business plan. This plan outlines the overall strategy for the product, including the marketing and sales approach, the distribution channels, and the financial projections. It also identifies the key risks and opportunities associated with the product. The business plan is a critical document that guides the development and production of the product, and it is used to secure funding from investors or lenders.

5. The final step in the process is to launch the product into the market. This involves creating a marketing campaign to generate awareness and interest in the product, and implementing a sales strategy to reach potential customers. The launch is a critical moment for the product, and it requires careful planning and execution to ensure a successful introduction into the market. Once the product is launched, the development team should continue to monitor its performance and gather feedback from customers to inform future improvements.
