It is important to note that the observed uniformity of responses at the more long-term end of the scale (i.e., 4 months) is more likely to be due to the stability of the trait than to the stability of the measurement. The measurement error is more likely to be high for the early end of the scale than for the long-term end. The longitudinal design minimizes the influence of measurement error on the correlation between scores at 1 and 4 months.

1) Interpretation is a methodology for the social world, where the three important social things to describe are: a) space, b) time and c) relationships. The social space is the surface of the social world, and time the order. The dimension that studies the relationships is the social structure, where the things that represent the social structure are the social relations. The structure is a network (p. 20).

5. Interpretation: Analysis showed that the rates associated with the presence of a child in the household were lower for the white population than for the black population. The rates for the black population were higher than for the white population. This suggests that the black population is more likely to have a child in the household than the white population.
