Abstract

WARNING: Improper use or maintenance of this equipment is a serious safety hazard. Improper use, maintenance, or safety-related components, may result in personal injury or death. Safety-related components should be used.

- [illegible]

- Principle of non-interference: non-interference means that the state is not to interfere with the internal affairs of other states. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 2(4) of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of conducting military operations in other countries without the consent of those countries.
- Principle of self-determination: self-determination is the right of a people to determine their own political status and to pursue their economic, social, and cultural development. This principle is also enshrined in Article 1 of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of supporting and conducting military operations in other countries without the consent of those countries.
- Principle of proportionality: proportionality is the principle that the use of force must be proportional to the threat that it is intended to address. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 51 of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of conducting military operations that are disproportionate to the threat that they are intended to address.
- Principle of necessity: necessity is the principle that the use of force must be necessary to address a threat. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 51 of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of conducting military operations that are not necessary to address the threat that they are intended to address.
- Principle of non-refoulement: non-refoulement is the principle that a state must not return a person to a country where they would be at risk of persecution, torture, or other serious human rights violations. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 33 of the UN Refugee Convention. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of returning people to countries where they would be at risk of persecution, torture, or other serious human rights violations.
- Principle of non-discrimination: non-discrimination is the principle that the use of force must not be based on race, ethnicity, or other characteristics. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 1 of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of conducting military operations that are based on race, ethnicity, or other characteristics.
- Principle of transparency: transparency is the principle that the use of force must be transparent and accountable. This principle is a cornerstone of international law and is enshrined in Article 51 of the UN Charter. It is a principle that is often violated in the context of the war on terror, as the US has been accused of conducting military operations that are not transparent and accountable.
