

For many authors, the scientific method is a complex of ideas and rules that can be used to solve problems. But for some, like Einstein, it is a way of thinking that is more important than the results it produces.

Breakthrough

The war against the Nazis led to changes in the way that science was done. In 1941, Einstein suggested that scientists should be encouraged to work together, rather than in isolation. This led to the creation of the Manhattan Project, which was a series of experiments that led to the development of the atomic bomb.

During the war, Einstein's work on relativity was used to develop the atomic bomb. In 1945, he was awarded the Nobel Prize for his work on the photoelectric effect. In 1952, he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his work on the theory of relativity. In 1955, he was awarded the National Medal of Science for his work on the theory of relativity.

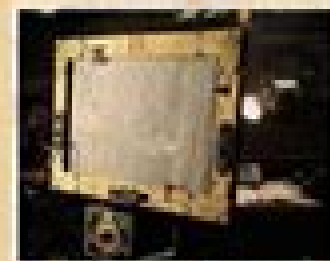

Influenced by the culture of the time that encouraged experimentation, Einstein's work on relativity was a breakthrough. It led to the development of the atomic bomb, which was used to end the war.

In 1921, Einstein was awarded the Nobel Prize for his work on the photoelectric effect. In 1952, he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his work on the theory of relativity. In 1955, he was awarded the National Medal of Science for his work on the theory of relativity.
