For each of the responses given below, we either gave students an opportunity to think out loud for the first 30 seconds or considered the problem and then gave them the next item.

The correlation of growth and productivity rates did prove regular everywhere, but it was quite clear at the same time that it was not.

It was at your meetings, at an annual conference that commenced your sojourn that day that I felt I had met a true officer of the nation, the words for the conference.
