

Ethics Midterm Study Guide

Chapter 1

Empirical Inquiry: Historical or Scientific, describe or explain the phenomena of morality or to work out a theory of human nature which bears on ethical question.

Chapter 6:

Cahn and moral dimensions

To act morally is not to act out of fear of punishment, not to act as one is commanded. Rather it is to act as one ought to act, and how one ought to act is not dependent on anyones power, even if the power be divine.

Existence of God

Morality does not rest on that belief. Consequently those who do not believe can be highly moral as well as immoral people, and those who do believe can be highly immoral. This conclusion shouldn't come as a surprise to the life of the Buddha or the teacher of atheist or the life of the monk. Believing in does not by itself imply any specific moral principles, and knowing will does not provide any justification for morality. Regardless of our religious commitments, the MORAL DIMENSIONS of our lives remains to be explored.

Psychological Egoism: the view that all men are selfish in everything that they do, that is, that the only motive from which anyone ever acts is self interest. Even when men are acting in ways apparently calculated to benefit others, they are actually motivated by the belief that acting in this way is to their own advantage, and if they did not believe this, they would not be doing that action.
