Urban Water Security Robert C. Brears, 2017-01-17 In the 21st Century the world will see an unprecedented migration of people moving from rural to urban areas With global demand for water projected to outstrip supply in the coming decades cities will likely face water insecurity as a result of climate change and the various impacts of urbanisation Traditionally urban water managers have relied on large scale supply side infrastructural projects to meet increased demands for water however these projects are environmentally economically and politically costly Urban Water Security argues that cities need to transition from supply side to demand side management to achieve urban water security This book provides readers with a series of in depth case studies of leading developed cities of differing climates incomes and lifestyles from around the world that have used demand management tools to modify the attitudes and behaviour of water users in an attempt to achieve urban water security Urban Water Security will be of particular interest to town and regional planners water conservation managers and policymakers international companies and organisations with large water footprints environmental and water NGOs researchers graduate and undergraduate students Corporate Power and Human Rights Manette Kaisershot, Nicholas Connolly, 2018-02-02 There is ample evidence about the negative effects business activity of all types can have on the provision of human rights Equally there can be little doubt economic development usually driven through business activity and trade is necessary for any state to provide the institutions and infrastructure necessary to secure and provide human rights for their citizens The United Nations and businesses recognise this tension and are collaborating to effect change in business behaviours through voluntary initiatives such as the Global Compact and John Ruggie's Guiding Principles Yet voluntary approaches are evidently failing to prevent human rights violations and there are few alternatives in law for affected communities to seek justice This book seeks to robustly challenge the current status quo of business approaches to human rights in order to develop meaningful alternatives in an attempt to breach the gap between the realities of business and human rights and its discourse This book was previously published as a special issue of the International needed in advance in order to achieve the conservation requirements For regions of international attention particularly those that have the attention of many management or policy oriented bodies a standardized process is needed to harmonize the scientific information on the status and trends in ecosystems used by the different bodies That process also needs to ensure the information is available in a timely manner For example assessments of change in habitats species and or food webs in the Southern Ocean are currently compiled separately for at least ten different international organizations or processes A Marine Ecosystem Assessment for the Southern Ocean MEASO aims to harmonize that information for policy makers This assessment began with an international conference in April 2018 <http://www.measo2018.aq> where it was agreed to undertake the first MEASO over 2018 2019 with the view to provide the outcomes to relevant bodies such as the Scientific Committee for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources soon after
