Accumulating and Assigning Costs to Products

QUESTIONS

- 4-1 The cost of the raw materials entered into production is moved from the raw materials account to the work-in-process inventory account. The cost of manufacturing labor and overhead costs are assigned to production by adding them to the work-in-process inventory account. Overhead costs are assigned (or allocated or apportioned) as determined by the cost system, before manufacturing is completed, work is transferred to finished goods inventory, and costs are moved from the work-in-process inventory account to the finished goods inventory account. - 4-2 Manufacturing organizations face greater challenges in product costing, especially the assignment of overhead costs, than would an service organization do. The latter often looked at manufacturing costing systems in an adverse way because the costs that products accumulated as they processed organizations' resources during manufacturing, as described above in 4-1. In small organizations, growth via purchased value that manufactured the cost of the goods purchased is added over an increase that accumulated the cost of manufacturing inventory in the costs. Items that various overhead costs such as labor, depreciation on the costs, lighting, and heating. The primary focus on small organizations is the profitability of products based on depreciation. Therefore, small organizations like manufacturing organizations, face the issue of how to allocate various overhead costs to determine, for example, the cost of purchasing and selling products, or depreciation costs.

Service organizations that undertake major projects, such as in a consultancy, focus on determining the cost of a project. In such instances, the major direct cost, negligible part, is when a large proportion of the project's cost. The organization will then assign various overhead costs to determine project profitability.
