

CHAPTER 10

The first part of the chapter discusses the importance of the environment in the development of the individual. It then goes on to discuss the role of the family in the development of the individual. The chapter concludes with a discussion of the role of the school in the development of the individual.

THE ENVIRONMENT

The environment is the physical and social surroundings in which an individual lives. It includes the family, the school, the community, and the culture.

THE FAMILY

The family is the primary social unit in which an individual grows up. It is the family that provides the child with the first experience of social interaction.

The family also provides the child with the first experience of love and affection. It is the family that teaches the child the values and norms of the society.

THE SCHOOL

The school is the institution where the child receives formal education. It is the school that provides the child with the knowledge and skills needed for life.

THE COMMUNITY

The community is the group of people who live in the same area. It is the community that provides the child with a sense of belonging and identity.

THE CULTURE

The culture is the set of beliefs, values, and customs that are shared by a group of people. It is the culture that shapes the child's identity and behavior.

THE INDIVIDUAL

The individual is the person who is born and grows up in a particular environment. It is the individual who is shaped by the environment and who shapes the environment.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDIVIDUAL

The development of the individual is a process that begins at birth and continues throughout life. It is the process by which the individual grows from a helpless infant into a self-sufficient adult.

THE ENVIRONMENT AND THE INDIVIDUAL

The environment and the individual are inseparable. The environment shapes the individual, and the individual shapes the environment.
