Life Mask

Jackie Kay

Syntax - the use of short, staccato sentences and fragments adds more tension to the poem. The choppy syntax also mirrors the speaker's experience of abuse, conveying the brutality and disruption of her life.

Structure - the poem is structured as a testimony, with the speaker recounting her experiences in a legal setting. This structure emphasises the gravity of the speaker's situation and the speaker's seeking redress.

Additionally, this is written from the perspective of a person who has experienced a broken heart and is going through healing. Through a series of short descriptions, we can see that this person is starting to feel peace and hope in their journey towards healing.

The phrase "I sat up with my head in my hands" suggests an internal struggle—the person is recognizing their pain, while still being resistant enough to not forward to a better future. Altogether, these elements paint a vivid picture of someone desperately coping at the moment, representing their surroundings with metaphorical options.
