South Africa Alexander Johnston, 2014-07-31 At the heart of South Africa's miracle transition from intractable ethnic racial conflict to democracy was an improvised nation born out of war weariness hope idealism and calculated pragmatism on the part of the elites who negotiated the compromise settlement In the absence of any of the conventional bonds of national consciousness the improvised nation was fixed on the civic identity and national citizenship envisaged in the new constitution In the twentieth anniversary year of the country's democracy South Africa reviews the progress of nation building in post apartheid South Africa assesses how well the improvised nation has been embedded in a shared life for South Africans and offers a prognosis for its future It draws up a socio economic profile of the population which is the raw material of nation building It measures the contributions of the polity and the constitution religion and values as well as sport and the media to building a sense of national citizenship The book explains the abrupt discontinuity between the contributions of Nelson Mandela and Thabo Mbeki to nation building and goes on to note the changing focus from reconciliation between black and white to include a concern for social cohesion in a society beset by violent crime corruption and citizen deviance and dissidence South Africa reconsiders the short intense life cycle of Afrikaner nationalism and portrays the ambiguous relationships between African nationalism non racialism civic nationalism and African tradition in the ideology and practice of the African National Congress In doing so it provides a comprehensive analysis of a crucial aspect of South Africa's first twenty years of democracy as well as exploring intriguing questions for the student of nationalism

SA Tribes Steven M. Burgess, Mari Harris, Robert B. Mattes, 2002 Every South African has a stake in a peaceful and prosperous South Africa The SA Tribes programme is one of the most comprehensive research studies carried out in South Africa's history Nearly 15 000 South Africans were interviewed during the period 1997 2001 From the poorest Xhosa speakers in the Eastern Cape to wealthy Sandton executives representatives from every strata of this country's diverse populace have been questioned The resultant assessment is as thought provoking as it is groundbreaking UCT professor Steve Burgess has worked closely with learned colleagues from all over the world and has enjoyed extensive support from leading research companies Markinor and Gallup to put together this authoritative and insightful portrait of the Rainbow Nation as it heads towards its 10th anniversary Although initially conceived as a tool for marketers seeking to understand the changing demographics of the new South Africa SA Tribes has become required reading for anyone determined to understand the social and political geography of the country SA Tribes contends that understanding and embracing our social identities rather than dwelling on racial differences is key to a successful society in South Africa Thanks to the SA Tribes study we are now better placed than ever to know and understand our neighbours

Making Education Inclusive Sharon Moonsamy, Elizabeth Walton, 2015-09-18

Exclusionary pressures and practices are pervasive in education despite the clamour for more inclusive education Even as classrooms worldwide become more diverse education is unlikely to become inclusive without deliberate efforts to dismantle exclusion and enable inclusion This book is a compilation of contributions to the conversation about what these efforts might entail The conversation has its origins in the Making Education Inclusive Conference held in 2013 which brought together academics and practitioners from Southern Africa and other countries Given the expectation that teachers should play a key role in promoting inclusion it is not surprising to find significant interest in teacher education from many of the contributing authors Their concerns range from explicit teacher development for pedagogical responsiveness to learner diversity to overcoming the epistemological marginalisation that learners experience where teachers are not fully confident of their subject content and how to teach it Access to education is clearly not enough and other contributors to this book concern themselves with ways in which structures and systems could be reconstituted to enable meaningful inclusion This might mean looking at how teachers might use tiered systems of behaviour support and various metacognitive strategies how physical access can be promoted on a university campus and understanding how parents think about disability Each chapter represents a different perspective on what it might mean to resist educational exclusion in its many forms and each offers possible ways to make education more inclusive

by examining the teaching of reading and numeracy at the foundational levels of schooling Offering a data rich historical sociology of curriculum and pedagogic change this book will appeal to academics researchers and postgraduate students in the fields of education sociology of education curriculum studies educational equality and school reform and the policy and politics of education

Reflections on School Integration Mokubung O. Nkomo, Carolyn McKinney, Linda Chisholm, 2004

School integration means among other things that the divisions created by apartheid need to be addressed systematically and systemically Integration is not merely about changing the racial demographics of learner and educator bodies It means schools changing to meet the needs of all children fostering meaningful interaction among learners in the classroom on the playground and in extra mural activities as well as instilling a human rights culture It means constructing curricula texts and pedagogies that are informed by a democratic ethos and it requires teachers school managers and communities that are equipped to promote a democratic school environment In short it is about inclusivity and social cohesion And the issue of integration is as pertinent internationally as it is in South Africa questions of race racism citizenship and diversity are central to school systems throughout the world This book contains the proceedings of a colloquium held in October 2003 attended by leading South African and international researchers to take stock of the status quo in school integration and identify new directions research should be taking to support the process of change
