

4. Remove the front circular steer/axle access covers at the front of the chassis, and the rear square cover at the top rear of the chassis to gain access to the axle/steer valves.

5. Install a pressure gauge at the front axle/steer valve at MS2 port. This should be located on the left side of the valve closest to the left front wheel spindle. Position the steer switch to activate the left front steer cylinder until the rod is in the fully extended position and hold the switch for a few seconds after the rod has been fully extended. The MS2 port should read 2000 psi (138 Bar). If the pressure is not 2000 psi (138 Bar) adjust relief valve mounted next to the MS2 port, CW to increase or CCW to decrease.

6. Remove the pressure gauge from MS2 port and install on the MS1 port, which is on the right side of the front axle/steer valve, closest to the right front wheel spindle. Position the steer switch to activate the left front steer cylinder until the rod is in the fully retracted position and hold the switch for a few seconds after the rod has stopped. The MS1 port should read 2600 psi (179 Bar). If the pressure is not correct, adjust relief valve next to MS1 port, CW to increase or CCW to decrease.

7. This step involves aligning the left front wheel spindle with the axle weldment. Position the left front wheel spindle "straight" using a square and rule or string for proper alignment (Refer to Section 6 - JLG Control System). Once the left front wheel spindle has been properly measured, press "ENTER" on the Analyzer. This is calibrating data to the JLG Control System that the left front steer sensor is centered.
