

Interface

A point where two systems meet and interact. Typically this is the transfer of data from one system to another via Point-to-Point or through an Integration engine.

Interoperability

Is the ability of making systems and organizations work together (inter-operate).

Legacy Support

Support of any and all legacy interfaces that will be replaced with the new EMR implementation.

LOINC

Logical Observation Identifiers Names and Codes (LOINC) is a database and universal standard for identifying medical laboratory observations. It was developed and is maintained by the Regenstrief Institute, a US non-profit medical research organization, in 1994.

Mapped Record Testing

This is the phase of testing that incorporates all the tables and lists that are included in the EMR and Ancillary systems. Testing every possible value that can come out of the Sending system to validate that it will function in the receiving system appropriately.

Mapping

This is a task that is usually takes place during the interface build. Matching specifications from sending and receiving systems, for integration purposes.

Regression Testing

This type of testing involves executing test scripts that that will validate all application/system functionality after system upgrades have been performed. The key to this testing is to ensure that the upgrades have not "broken" existing functionality or introduced new "faults".

Script Development

This task is performed as early as possible during the integration project. It is translating the Business workflows and data workflows into readable and usable testing scripts that will be used during the Integration Testing phase. Usually led and managed by the Testing Coordinator.

SNOMED

The primary purpose of SNOMED CT is to encode the meanings that are used in health information and to support the effective clinical recording of data with the aim of improving patient care. SNOMED CT provides the core general terminology for electronic health records.
