and military leaders persisted in 1942 and 1943 in endorsing ever tougher screening and little else. Soon families complained of fathers and teens being drafted instead of being identified as psychiatric 4Fs and Blacks and Native Americans among others complained of bias. A frustrated General George S. Patton famously slapped two malingering neuropsychiatric patients in Sicily, a sentiment shared by Marshall and Eisenhower though they favored a tamer style. Yet psychiatric rejections, evacuations and discharges mounted. While psychiatrist Roy Grinker and a few others treated soldiers close to the front in Tunisia in early 1943, this was the exception. But as demand for manpower soared and psychiatrists finally went to the field and saw that combat itself, not predisposition, precipitated breakdown, leading military psychiatrists switched their emphasis from screening to prevention and treatment. But this switch was too little, too late and slowed by a year-long series of Inspector General investigations, even while numbers of psychiatric casualties soared. Ironically, despite and even partly because of psychiatrists' wartime performance plus the emotional toll of war, postwar America soon witnessed a dramatic growth in numbers, popularity and influence of the profession, culminating in the National Mental Health Act 1946. But veterans with PTSD, not recognized until 1980, were largely neglected.

Assessing Contexts of Learning Susanne Kuger, Eckhard Klieme, Nina Jude, David Kaplan, 2016-12-05. This volume brings together educational effectiveness research and international large scale assessments, demonstrating how the two fields can be applied to inspire and improve each other and providing readers direct links to instruments that cover a broad range of topics and have been shown to work in more than 70 countries. The book's initial chapters introduce and summarize recent discussions and developments in the conceptualization, implementation and evaluation of international large scale context assessments and provide an outlook on possible future developments. Subsequently, three thematic sections: Student Background, Outcomes of Education Beyond Achievement and Learning in Schools, each present a series of chapters that provide the conceptual background for a wide range of important topics in education research, policy and practice. Each chapter defines a conceptual framework that relates recent findings in the educational effectiveness research literature to current issues in education policy and practice. These frameworks were used to develop interesting and relevant indicators that may be used for meaningful reporting from international assessments, other cross cultural research or national studies. Using the example of one particular survey, the Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) 2015, this volume links all theoretical considerations to fully developed questionnaire material that was field tested and evaluated in questionnaires for students and their parents as well as teachers and principals in their schools. The primary purposes of this book are to inform readers about how education effectiveness research and international large scale assessments are already interacting to inform research and policymaking, to identify areas where a closer collaboration of both fields or input from other areas could further improve this work, to provide sound theoretical frameworks for future work in both fields and finally to relate these theoretical debates to currently available and evaluated material for future context assessments.

Handbook of Child Psychology and Developmental Science, Ecological Settings and Processes, 2015-03-31 The essential reference for human development theory, updated and reconceptualized. The Handbook of Child Psychology and Developmental Science is a four-volume reference in the field-defining work to which all others are compared. First published in 1946 and now in its Seventh Edition, the Handbook has long been considered the definitive guide to the field of developmental science. Volume 4, Ecological Settings and Processes in Developmental Systems, is centrally concerned with the people, conditions, and events outside individuals that affect children and their development. To understand children's development, it is both necessary and desirable to embrace all of these social and physical contexts. Guided by the relational developmental systems metatheory, the chapters in the volume are ordered from near proximal contexts in which children find themselves and moving through to distal contexts that influence children in equally compelling if less immediately manifest ways. The volume emphasizes that the child's environment is complex, multi-dimensional, and structurally organized into interlinked contexts; children actively contribute to their development; the child and the environment are inextricably linked; and contributions of both child and environment are essential to explain or understand development. Understand the role of parents, other family members, peers, and other adults; teachers, coaches, mentors in a child's development; Discover the key neighborhood, community, and institutional settings of human development; Examine the role of activities, work, and media in child and adolescent development; Learn about the role of medicine, law, government, war, and disaster, culture, and history in contributing to the processes of human development. The scholarship within this volume and as well across the four volumes of this edition illustrate that developmental science is in the midst of a very exciting period. There is a paradigm shift that involves increasingly greater understanding of how to describe, explain, and optimize the course of human life for diverse individuals living within diverse contexts. This Handbook is the definitive reference for educators, policy makers, researchers, students, and practitioners in human development, psychology, sociology, anthropology, and neuroscience.
